As to the former, the Japanese feel that their judicial system is now conducted on such modern and enlightened lines that it can be safely trusted in the trial of cases arising at the treaty ports of Japan, in which Americans are parties. Heretofore the American Consular courts in Japan have tried these cases.

English newspapers just received state that the Envoys above mentioned have been sent from Swaziland to lay before the English Government the native objections to what is known as the "organic organization," that is, an arrangement which gives the practical government of Swaziland into the hands of the Boors. Boers.

Swaziland, containing a native population of nearly 60,000, is bounded on three sides by the Transvaai Republic, and the Boers airendy hold large concessions in the territory, and have gradually encroached upon the Eastern frontier of the State.

Against recognition of the encroachments and against the practical cession of the territory, the Swazis protest, maintaining that such a concession to the Boers is a practical violation of the Convention of 1854, which guaranteed the independence of Swaziland. There is reason to believe that Japan's desires will be recognized in the new treaty. that on Nov. 15, while in the Gulf stream, the crew were startled by the cry of "Man overboard!" Engines were reversed at full speed and stopped, while a boat was almost instantly launched and manned by Second Officer Reed and three seamen.

They pulled quickly to the rescue of the would-be suicide, and reached him as he was sinking for the last time. He was hauled into the boat, and proved to be the ship's porter, Otto Tuskowa, of Brooklyn, aged thirty-two. He had been acting strangely for several days, and had jumped from the starboard main deck, abaft the bridge, in a fit of insanity. He was seen climbing through the port by a sailor, who had the presence of mind to throw an empty barrel overboard at the same moment.

On being taken aboard Tuskowa was soon resuscitated. Second Officer Reed and his boat's crew undoubtedly saved the man by their prompt action, only ten minutes elapsing between the time the boat left the ship's side and its return.

His wife is prostrated, and can assign no reason for his ending his life other than a fit of temperary insanity. She says he has been subject to despondency of late, owing, she thinks, to his ill-health. He had symptoms of consumption, a disease which caused his sister's death.

He was very cheerful when he left home yesterday morning. He left his office in New York about 4 o'clock, and when he felled to return home last night. B. Ross, a rear-estate agent, and of Secott's neighbors, telephoned the sey City Folice. The funeral will place in Flushing.

You all know that it was not caused by my blow, but that he was filled with liquor and in no fit condition to enter a sparring exhibition." Fitz then asked to be told exactly how Riordan died. It is impossible to conjecture just what effect Fitzsimmens's misfortune will bave. He will probably be admitted to bail, and friends stand ready to put up any amount. The case will go to the Grand Jury and Fitz will doubtless be indicted for manifesting there. and Fits will doubtless be indicted for manslaughter. Fitzsimmons was admitted to bail this morning in the sum of $10,000. Fitzsimmons described the occurrence in this way: "When he fell to his knees, I did not think that I had hurt him, and supposed he only wanted to escape punish death." we had only been at it a few min-utes, when I made a pass at him. I hit him on the right cheek with the back of my right hand. It was merely a smart tap, and could not have more than stung him. He made one or two feints at me, then I was surprised to see him put up his haves and say. "Call time." It was quite a while before I realized how bad quite a while before I realized now had no was. "He drank a good deal of Bass's ale vasterday, and before he went on the stage lowned a big drink of whiskey. I suppose it all went to his head." Capt. Charles Glori was seen while Dr. Totman was busy examining Riordan. Glori was nervous, but showed no other signs of being disconcerted. He said: sther signs of being disconcerted. He said: "Con has played us like this several times before. I didn't think that it was anything but a drunken stupor. He had been drinking ever since I engaged him, three weeks ago, in New York. When he applied to me I said: 'Con. If you can keep straight, you can join the company.' He promised to be sober, but did not keep his promise." Asked to tell his version of the blow swhich knocked Riordan out, he said: "I have held the watch right along for Fits and Con. I generally let the first round run about a minute and a half, and the second about 40 seconds, because Con is apt to become weak. Last night I had let them go for about a second, when I saw Con look at me and say something. I could not understand what he said, but did not believe that he wanted me to call time. Then I saw him sink to the ground after Fitz had hit him an easy blow. I thought he was taking this means to escape punishment. It's all the result of his described. Miss Annie Taylor Brooklyn, N.
